This year's National Extrava-Can-Za, June 21 through 23, at the Sweden House in Rockford, Illinois has come and gone with many great memories for over twenty NPCC members from the United States and Canada. This Can-Vention was by far one of the best ones I have ever attended due to the large quantities of very rare foreign and domestic cans available.

Thursday started for me with a bus trip from Chicago and Tom wasted no time putting me to work as soon as he arrived home from his job. By Thursday evening we were ready for the incoming group of collectors.

Friday featured a trip to Janesville, Wisconsin for a tour of the oldest and smallest family run bottling company in the U.S., the J.C. Grey Bottling Plant. The tour was organized by NPCC member and owner of Green River Corporation, Dan Meyers. This tour was very interesting and educational. Afterwards we went store hopping for cans in Wisconsin and Illinois.

Friday featured room hopping and the swap meet set up with an evening trade session for NPCC members only. Many cans were exchanged hands.

Saturday featured breakfast at Stash O'Neil's with guest speaker Dan Meyers and one of the best trade sessions I have ever attended. I picked up many cans including some older cans I had seen in collections in Europe I had only dreamed to ever own such as Quosh Jokers (Tom & Jerrys) from England and Strike Ups from Sweden as well as prototype Coke and Pepsi cans which were one of a kind. Cone tops, flat tops, regular and special issues as well as a variety of sodabilia items were available. We also had a great turnout from the general public as well as two television crews. The day ended with a picnic at a nearby park.

A brief business meeting was held Friday for discussions on such topics as future conventions, the upcoming postal rate increase and recruitment of additional help to the club from the membership. Plans are already in the works for next year's Can-Vention to return to the Sweden House in Rockford June 20, 21 and 22, 1991. Mark this date on your 1991 calendar and make your plans to

Lyon Has Tale About

By DAVID LYON
Staff Writer

If you're tired of reading and hearing about worrisome topics such as global warming, ozone depletion, ground water contamination, nuclear proliferation, escalating drug-related crime, and the incredibly costly savings and loan bailout, here's something else to worry about: Disappearance of Coca-Cola in returnable 6½-ounce bottles from local store shelves.

This is assuredly a life-changing event, a looming disaster that ranks right up there with those others. But it has, to my knowledge, escaped the attention of the otherwise diligent news media that serve our area.

So it is left to me to assume the duty of reporting this regrettable, lamentable development that tears at the very fabric of American tradition.

71-Year Era Ends

After all, Coca-Cola has been marketed continuously in this area in essentially the same package since 1919 (the 6½-ounce bottle even survived the "New Coke" fiasco five years ago.)

The end of this 71-year era just occurred in June, so it is, for a weekly paper, still legitimate "breaking news."

There is little dispute, of course, that Coca-Cola consumed from the traditional 6½-ounce bottle is a drink of superior taste when compared with Coke in any other package.

The Coca-Cola Company, as might be expected, claims that Coke is exactly the same product, regardless of the size or type of container.

But there are phenomena in life that defy explanation. This appears to be one of them. The 6½-ounce bottle must be imbued with mysterious properties. Whatever the reason, Coke just doesn't taste as good from a can or no-return bottle or two-liter plastic container.

Saw it Coming

Taste, unfortunately, does not appear to hold an important role in modern-day soft drink merchandising or consumption. Customers who used to be brand loyal now make choices that are price-driven.

Those of us who have been following the soft drink industry for a while could foresee the day when the familiar 6½-ounce bot-

Vanishing Americana

It explained, "Its distinctive shape and blown-in-the-bottle label are covered by letters patent — the means that the government affords for distinguishing the true from the false — the genuine from the substitute."
 "You believe in fair play in business? Then demand the genuine, bottled Coca-Cola, which from this date will be packed only in this new and distinctive bottle. "Keep a case in your home. Order from your dealer."

Minor Changes
 Minor design changes were made in the 6½-ounce bottle over the decades, the most obvious one being replacing the raised-letters label with a painted label starting about 30 years ago. Barry Guinlan of Lou's Pony Keg in Mason was one of the first retailers to tip off this particular consumer a few weeks ago that Coke in 6½-ounce bottles would no longer be available.
 "There's a lot of history in that bottle," Guinlan noted.
 And now the bottle is history, at least in this territory. You can still buy eight-packs of Coke in 6½-ounce and 16-ounce returnable bottles if you are willing to drive 60 or more miles into territory served by certain Coca-Cola bottlers in Indiana.
 Have taste buds, will travel.

Seems Ironic
 So now it has happened here. For all practical purposes, your local Coca-Cola bottler, part of a Minnesota-based conglomerate that sells Coke in 15 states, has gotten out of returnables entirely. The other soft drink companies that serve this area probably will follow suit.
 It seems ironic that, with all the emphasis on the need to recycle, we no longer can buy "pop" in the ultimate recyclable package. It was a significant event when the Coca-Cola bottle with the distinctive contoured design made its debut in this area in 1919. Before then, Coke was packaged in straight-sided bottles of a deep amber color. Imitators used similar bottles for their drinks, which tended to create confusion among consumers.
 The new Coca-Cola bottle was introduced to readers of The Western Star in the issue of May 29, 1919, in an unusually large ad, a quarter-page at the top of page five.

New, Distinctive
 The main device in the ad was a rendering of the new bottle, the design of which the Coca-Cola Company had patented. In the accompanying text, the Dayton Coca-Cola Bottling Co. (which had Lebanon in its territory) informed readers that the patented bottle would be "our mutual protection against imitations and substitutes."

ORBISON SALUTED; NEHI SCORES HIGH
 Royal Crown Cola Co.'s tribute concert to the late singer Roy Orbison, which raised money for the homeless, was nationally televised on the Showtime cable channel on May 6. MTV and VH-1 cable music stations assisted in promoting the show, which urged viewers to donate to the National Coalition for the Homeless by calling a 24-hour toll-free number. RC president Al Burke expects revenues from the concert, telecast and public donations to reach $2 million.
 Meanwhile, redesigned packaging for Nehi, identifying each of 12 flavors with a musical character, scored high with 80 percent of kids polled by Royal Crown in Chicago; Los Angeles; Miami; and Norfolk, VA.

CAN-O-GRAM

FROM THE MEMBERS FOR THE MEMBERS (17)

Debbie Rose and Maurice Hoogsteden have shared with us valuable information concerning the Coca-Cola Yo-Yo set from South Africa. There are "60" cans! Twelve different tricks are on Coca-Cola, Sprite, Fanta Orange, Grape and Peach (not lemon). They twelve tricks are as follows:

- 1) Walking the Dog
- 2) The Break-Away
- 3) Three Leaf Clover
- 4) The Elevator
- 5) Pinwheel
- 6) Over the Falls
- 7) Loop-the-Loop
- 8) The Spinner
- 9) Skyrocket
- 10) Around the Corner
- 11) Rock the Baby
- 12) Sleeping Beauty

Stay tuned for more sets from South Africa.

Maurice also reports that there are two English Cherry Coke Pop Art cans designed similar to the US ones. The second one is the harder of the two. The first one appears in this issue.

From Ellington, Connecticut: Joe Bellivier sent us a copy of a Classic Coke 150th Erie County Fair, August 11th-20th 1989, that he has never seen in the CAN-O-GRAM. Unfortunately, we could not clearly reproduce his copy.

From Waterloo, Iowa: Craig Staley has picked up the Pepsi Tulip Time 1990 can from Oskaloosa, Iowa and is now search for the Knoxville International can.

From Ottawa, Ontario: Gunnar Foerstel also sent in a copy of a 7 Up with a cartoon character drawing just above the UPC label. The inscription says "...are you UP for a Fido Dido". We hop to have more on this one later.

Reporting from Louisville, Kentucky: Mack Mullins has found three variations of the Pepsi Richard Petty cans. Two of them appear in this issue. We will update you on the third in the near future.

And finally from Bowling Green, Kentucky: This editor has found three more of the Nehi Music/Pop Art cans, grape, orange and peach along with lemonade. As seen on page 18, this is a very attractive and colorful one too. This set also may be very difficult to complete. Keep your eyes and ears open for any information on this set. Thank!

There has been much can activity during the past few months. We are trying to keep on top of all the developments, but it is impossible without your help. Lets go to the field and our reporters.

From Winnipeg, Manitoba: Kelly Wilson informs us that there are two more Canadian Coke Pop Art cans being release bring the total this summer to four for each size, 280ml (10oz) and 355ml (12oz). Kelly also reports that the province of Ontario is discontinuing the use of 280ml cans. They will now be using the 355ml size as they do in Western Canada.
