New Coke ad campaign 'unprecedented' offering

© 1993 Cox News Service

ATLANTA — Movie director Rob Reiner's commercial in Coca-Cola Co.'s new ad campaign is about the only thing close to a traditional touchy-feely Coke ad: Marjorie and Eddie, who met drinking the cola as kids, dip two straws into a bottle at their 50th wedding anniversary party.

The rest of the campaign — Coca-Cola's biggest in a decade and featuring the new theme, "Always Coca-Cola" — goes from hip to weird to funny, in one, an ornery pooh has a talent for digging up Coke bottles.

The commercials will be the public's first taste of Coca-Cola's much-anticipated pairing of McCann-Erickson Worldwide, its longtime ad agency, with Creative Artists Agency, which represents a stable of big-name Hollywood directors and actors.

The commercials are unprecedented, industry analysts said, in their number, their variety and the plans to air them across the television landscape. The ads start running today on 17 broadcast and cable TV channels that should reach at least 132 million people in the first week.

In contrast, Coca-Cola's previous "You Can't Beat the Real Thing" campaign included seven spots and aired predominantly on the networks.

And rival Pepsi-Cola's new campaign, "Be Young. Have Fun. Drink Pepsi," also has just seven variations, aimed mostly at the big audiences.

"We bought ads last year... like more of a gross commodity," Peter S. Sailey, Coca-Cola's director of global marketing, said in an interview. "Now, we're targeting places that are appropriate for each different audience.... We've gone from a mass attack to a rifle-shot."

While the ads get bizarre at times, they're always anchored with the theme, "Always Coca-Cola."

Coke takes no prisoners in continuing cola wars

NEW YORK (AP) — Coca-Cola Classic's lead widened over Pepsi as the nation's best-selling soft drink last year, but overall industry sales grew at the slowest pace since the mid-1970s, according to a widely followed trade newsletter.

Beverage Digest said industrywide retail sales rose to $47.4 billion in 1992, up 0.9 percent from $47 billion a year earlier. Jesse Meyers, who publishes the newsletter from Greenwich, Conn., and has followed the industry for more than 30 years, said it was the slowest growth rate since 1973-74, when a huge increase in sugar prices spilled over into soft drinks, and industry sales were essentially unchanged for two years.

The blizzard poor weather this past summer and the weak economy for depressing 1992 soft drink sales.

Beverage Digest said Coca-Cola Classic was the best-selling brand with 20 percent of the market, unchanged from 1991. Pepsi held onto second place although its share dropped to 18 percent from 18.4 percent.

Old look

Coca-Cola Co. is testing a recyclable plastic version, above left, of its old-style contour bottle, right. The glass version, designed in 1915, served as the model for the 20-ounce plastic bottle.

Introduction of the old look will begin in Chattanooga and in Birmingham, Ala., this week. The bottle will be used for Coca-Cola Classic and Diet Coke products. (AP Photo)

Roddy Coca-Cola chief says sale fell through

The sale of Roddy Coca-Cola Bottling Co. fell through in late December, and the company is not currently negotiating with a possible purchaser, Roddy told the Associated Press. Roddy said the decision to sell the company was made in late December, but he said the negotiations had been going on for some time. Roddy, president of the company, said the company was founded in 1902. The company expects to terminate the re-licensing agreement with the parent company in late 1992, according to the letter. The company has also frozen one of its recently owned bottlers.

Soda tops water in American cups

HARTFORD COURANT
Just last year, thirsty Americans drank more soda than anything else, 40 percent more soda than tap water, in fact — enough of the sweet and bubbly to fill 2,395 Olympic-size 6-foot-deep swimming pools.
If all the Diet Coke Americans have drunk since that brand's inception were to run together like a mighty, ultrasweetened river, it could roar over Niagara Falls uninterrupted for about an hour and a half.

Pop goes the Coke can

Look quick. See anything unusual in this Coke carton? You might not notice it in the store, either. It's a 20-can pack, a size that is easily mistaken for the standard 24-can pack. Mr. Tidbit has no idea under what circumstances the 20-can pack is making its appearance — whether it is going to replace the 24-can pack or it is only still another way to buy Coke. In either case, before you grab a pack of Coke in a hurry, you might be wise to check both price and number of cans.

Clear sailing

The Coca-Cola Co. announced Tuesday that in mid-March it will introduce Tab Clear in Japan, the third nation to have the sugar-free, calorie-free soft drink.

The company introduced the drink in 10 U.S. cities Jan. 4 and placed it on store shelves in Great Britain this week.

The new version of Coca-Cola's Tab diet drink is clear instead of colored.

■ In October, a federal appeals court upheld a $325,000 jury award to Robert Fischer, who had claimed that an electrical shock he received from a Pepsi-Cola machine in Omaha, Neb., in 1987 had left him impotent. Fischer's wife was awarded $35,000 for loss of services.
